

Say "Cheese"

"As painful as a trip to the dentist" has always been a metaphor for describing an uncomfortable experience, but after one visit with the renowned dynamic duo of cosmetic dentistry, Drs. Steven and Debra Glassman, this phrase will take on a new meaning (with the help of a little laughing gas, of course). The Glassmans' use of lasers for whitening, photo oral analysis for restructuring the smile and air abrasion for eliminating tooth decay has resulted in celebrity smiles for many non-celebrities leaving their office (including the numerous celebrities whose smiles they correct as well).

To start, Steven measures, manipulates and photographs each tooth, and then analyzes every bite angle and jaw alignment. After a thorough diagnosis, the two proceed to permanently correct the smile. Tooth size and shape, as well as spaces in between, can be adjusted through the application of porcelain veneers. Any existing tooth decay is literally sandblasted off in a painless procedure called air abrasion. The gum line is restored through the use of lasers to remove excess or damaged gum tissue. Another exciting new procedure they perform is laser whitening. Rather than having to endure sleepless nights with painful bleaching trays in your mouth, you can stop in during your lunch hour and have your entire mouth whitened painlessly. The Glassmans are also pioneers in the use of the new Cerac II machine, which manufactures perfect crowns in the office in just 10 minutes—instead of 10 days. Neglecting dental care not only diminishes your physical appearance, it can also diminish your health. In most cases, correcting your smile is just one visit away. With a good smile being one of the first things noticed, this can really affect your social life in a positive way.
